A Country House.

And about 200 acres of Land, within 3 miles of Alexandria, will be sold by the subscriber. The house was formerly occupied by himself, and is about one third of a mile from his present dwelling. The situation is high and remarkably healthy. The house has 4 rooms, and a kitchen and pantry, on the lower floor, and four chambers with fire places in the 2d story. It was well built under the superintendence of Mr. Loring, a respectable English architect, and would make a comfortable summer retreat for a gentleman, or might be made a valuable Tavern by opening a road through the land. About one half of the land is in wood; the residue is capable of being made handsome grounds. There is a good well and pump in the yard; and there are several good springs on the land.

The terms of payment will be one fifth in four months; the residue in four equal annual payments with interest; one half secured by notes well endorsed, and the whole by a deed of trust on the land.

Possession may be had immediately.

Boston Centinel.

Mr. Russel.—On my way to Church last Sabbath, I passed through a grove, where the falling of the leaves, (occasioned by the frost the preceding night,) reminded me more forcibly than ever of the brevity of human life; and also of the justness of the Prophet's similitude, "where he says, 'We all do fade as a leaf.'" On my return home, the subject again occupied my mind, and led to the following reflections, which, if you please, you may publish as a Saturday's Monitor. Yours, AMICUS.

"WE ALL DO FADE AS A LEAF."
HOW rapidly time glides away,
Our being how transient and brief!
'Tis hardly a moment we stay,
Before we decay as the leaf.

Now Autumn reminds us once more,
That nature is fading and brief;
That shortly our day will be o'er,
When we must decay as the leaf.

In Infancy, Childhood and Youth,
We banish reflection and grief,
And seldom will list to the truth,
That all must decay as the leaf.

Yet oft in those seasons we see,
But lately 'twas witness'd with grief,
The youngest is taken of three,
To show us we fade as a leaf.

Though many to Manhood attain,
Unbroken by sorrow and grief,
Yet age is attended with pain,
And shortly we fade as a leaf.

The few who arrive at four score,
Are commonly palsied and deaf;
Their sight oft has left them before,
Thus fading away like the leaf.

The longer we live on the earth,
The stranger will be our belief,
That all men are doomed from their birth,
To fade and decay as the leaf.

Who then, that is wise would delay,
(Since life's so uncertain and brief.)
To think and prepare for the day,
In which he must fade as the leaf.

To day, bless'd with health and career,
We're strangers to sorrow and grief;
But oft ere the Sun gilds the West,
We suddenly fade as the leaf.

There's nothing this world can afford,
But what is both fleeting and brief;
The riches we labor to hoard,
Oft cause us to fade as the leaf.

How man can be thoughtless and gay,
Surpasses almost our belief,
When thousands remind us each day,
That soon we must fade as the leaf.

Ye sinners who virtue forsake,
For pleasures delusive and brief,
Consider your awful mistake,
Before you decay as the leaf.

Lorenzo, the blooming and gay,
Of sinners was reckon'd the chief;
Like you he went heedless astray,
Nor thought he should fade as the leaf.

To him splendid talents were lent,
Whose loss overwhelmed him with grief,
He saw 'twas too late to repent,
When told he must fade as the leaf.

Then raising his eyes in despair,
He looked the penitent thief,
But ere he could utter a prayer,
He faded away like the leaf.

Last night, he this world bade adieu,
His friends had long watched him with grief,
His end was too shocking to view,
He fell like a frost bitten leaf.

Let youth then no longer pursue
A course, that will plunge them in grief;
But constantly keep in view,
That they too must fade as the leaf.

In childhood let virtue be sown,
Lest manhood be poisoned with grief,
Or age overtake you too soon,
And cause you to fade as the leaf.

Though none are exempt from the fate,
Which spread such destruction and grief;
But all must depart soon or late
And fade and decay as the leaf.

Yet let us not grieve and repine,
Because our existence is brief;
Religion has comforts divine,
Which never will fade as a leaf.

She bids us this world to resign,
And yield her our fullest belief;
Then in Heaven like stars we shall shine
No more to decay as the leaf.

From the Charleston Times
To the Ladies of Charleston.
Ye Bells and ye Lasses and pert little things
Who trip in the frolicsome round

Prithes, tell me from whence this indecency springs,
The sexes at once to confound.
What means the cock'd hat and the masculine air,
With each motion design'd to perplex?
Bright eyes were intended to languish, not stare.
And softness the test of your sex.

The girl who on beauty depends for support,
May call every art to her aid,
The bosom display'd and the petticoat short,
Are samples she gives of her trade;
But you, on whom Fortune indulgently smiles
And whom Pride has preserv'd from the snares,
Should slyly attack us with coyness and wiles,
Not with open and insolent airs.

The Venus, whose statue delights all mankind,
Shrinks modestly back from the view,
And kindly should seem by the artist design'd,
To serve as a model for you;
Then learn with her beauties to copy her air,
Nor venture too much to reveal,
Our fancies will paint what you cover with care,
And double each charm you conceal.

The blushes of Mora, and the mildness of May,
Are charms which no art can procure
O! be but yourselves, and our homage we'll pay
And your empire is solid and pure;
And if Amazon like, you attack your gallants,
And put us in fear of our lives,
You may do very well for Sisters and Aunts,
But believe me, you'll never be Wives.

PRUDENCE.
JUVENILE PREACHER.
'Tis filled. Before breakfast too Ah! could the decanter speak 'twould tell a tale its owner would blush to hear. But enough. From the drunkard and his cups, let us turn, with compassion for the man, with contempt for his crime and pay a visit to his next door neighbor, the departed spirit arrests our attention. In yonder house lies the pale, the lifeless remains of an once promising youth, snatched from the fond embrace of his aged parents, about to be consigned to the cold clods of the valley. Distracted with grief; unsupported by the consolations of a pious resignation to the will of Heaven, the partner of his bosom knows not where to look for relief. Ask you the reason why death has entered the window, and borne triumphant on its iron bars the fallen victim? You might be informed that once he bid fair for a long, a prosperous and a useful life. But falling into the company of Gamblers, he was persuaded to pass a few leisure moments at the innocent diversion of cards. A little he lost—a little more he gained—inclination followed indulgence, till at length, by slow and imperceptible degrees, what at first was merely diversion became the chief object of pursuit. The business of life and the cares of his family were forgotten and neglected. The wife of his bosom, the mother of his child, left alone to wearisome days and sleepless nights, anxious for his fate, impatient for his return, sits and mourns in silent sorrow, till the clock strikes two, and steps at the door announces his approach! But ah! how awful the disappointment! It was the approach of others, bearing the breathless remains of what once he was! Need we be informed, that, stripped of his property by an unlucky game, he manly plunged the fatal weapon, and became at once the instrument of his awful exit, and the cause of "lamentation and mourning and woe," to his afflicted family, bringing down the hairs of his venerable parents with sorrow to the grave.

Reader—say you that
"On fancy's airy horse I ride?"
Go, then, to the chamber of revelry,
To the garret of the gambler, and learn from the language and the quarrels of the card table, that these are not the airy phantoms of a disordered imagination—go, and with sorrow exclaim, "Oe half has not been told me."

A person endeavouring to prove to Dr. Johnson that an atheist may be a man of a good moral character; "Sir," said the Doctor, "when a man rejects his allegiance to his Creator, what has he to restrain him from the perpetration of crimes? If an atheist was to drink tea with me, I should look very carefully after my spoons."

Austerity of the Monks of La Trappe.
Every one, at his first entrance, assumes a new name. With his former appellation, each is supposed not only to quit the world, but to abjure every recollection and memory of his former self. No word ever drops from their lips, which can possibly give the least clue, by which the others can guess who they are, or where they came from. Often have persons of the very name, by y and neighbourhood, lived together in the convent for years unknown to each other; nor have they suspected the proximity, till at the death of the one, the name on the grave stone revealed the secret to the survivor. Some years ago a youth of great talents, entered himself at La Trappe. His early and deep piety edified the whole society. After a few years, the austerities he had practiced at so early an age, undermined his health. He fell into a slow decline. One of the monks was appointed to attend him—He was selected as having himself left the world at a very early period. The youth died. About a year after his death, one of the monks, upon going to the burying ground, their usual walking place, he saw the monk, who attended the youth, standing with his arms folded, contemplating his tomb. On hearing him, he immediately fell back into the walks; no more notice was taken, he burying ground continued the usual walking place, nor did any other symptom escape. Ten years after the monk died.—His grave stone unfolded the secret. It was his only son, whom he wept, and whom, though unknown to him, he had so diligently attended.

ALEXANDRIA.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 1.

We this day present our readers with the address of Major LEE, to the freeholders of the Congressional District in which he resides.

We rejoice that this gentleman has come forward, because it is by such men, possessing such splendid talents and extensive learning, that we are to flourish at home and be respected abroad. We could wish that other gentlemen of the same standing, would follow his example, and by filling the situations which their fathers did before them, restore the nation to its former prosperity, dignity and justice.

To the Electors of the Congressional District, composed of the Counties of Stafford, King-George, Westmoreland, Richmond, Northumberland and Lancaster.

FELLOW-CITIZENS—I DECLARE myself a Candidate for the honor of representing you in the next Congress.

As I am actuated by no sordid motive, I shall not attempt, by pretensions, to glide into your confidence, or to over-reach your good sense. I profess, what I feel a desire to advance your welfare, an ambition to be distinguished by your preference, and a devotion to the free principles of our constitution.

Between my competitors and myself, judge as citizens of one common country, not as members of adverse parties. I bring to you, as I inherit the freedom of the soil, the spirit of your fathers; if your business is to be conducted with the pure patriotism which characterized this Republic, and by which alone people can be preserved—you will extend this gratification, nearly one square mile, been done justice to me, and discharge this duty to your country.

Every well organized government depends for its duration upon the free exercise of its functions. The state is kept sound by the brisk action of its constitutional powers, throwing off external, and expelling intestine griefs. The maxims deducible from this proposition, acquire force, in proportion to the distresses of the community to which it is applied. How impressively then must a reference to the situation of our own country, urge us to its observance!

But let us not look back. Let us forget the policy, which, in spite of our valor, our victories and good fortune, robbed war of its glories, and stripped her blessings from peace. Let us close the annals of misgovernment, and if possible arrest its practice.

To get a clear insight into the condition of a country, the readiest way is to examine its finances; as nothing touches in so many points, the interests, feelings and habits of a people, or so fully detects the spirit and character of their rulers. An enormous public debt, consuming an immense revenue, and this supplied by taxes that devour the country—extravagant expenditures, increased salaries, multiplied offices, exorbitant duties, a degraded currency; add to this, that the demands of the general government, this year, amount to the prodigious sum of Forty-two Millions, and you have an imperfect view of our finances. Remember, too, that the Farmer is bowed down with a weight of bounties, to foster premature and pernicious manufactures. Can you behold with indifference this scene of ruin? Wasted by war, scourged by pestilence, overrun by the troops of the Treasury, and threatened with famine, will still be the dupes of demagogues, the prey of stock-jobbers?

That a nation may be poor, and yet free, is true. Greece, Italy and Switzerland afford examples. But can that be true, he said to be free, whose poverty is not the effect of nature, but of legislative obstruction, and complicated fiscal extortion? The terms of the question convey its answer.

You will be told that these grievances are temporary, and your complaints will be lulled with promises of relief. It is one of the arts of dominion to suspend oppression, and of its practice to persuade, that relinquent tyranny is reviving freedom, and that mitigated rapacity is actual justice.

In Republican Governments, the right of the People to elect their Chief Magistrate, is essential to the Commonwealth, and dear to the Citizen. But of this right, as if dangerous from its importance, we have been deprived by the stratagems of faction. Our Presidents are no longer elected; they are appointed by Congresses. Even the other day, a convulsive of this sort, a fragment of Congress, proclaimed a successor to Mr. Madison. Yes, Fellow-Citizens, the right of filling the office in which the dignity, the power and the mercy of the nation are represented, is usurped by the very men who have since, in the wilds of the west, begged pardon for an act of public robbery. Thus, they fasten on the heart of the constitution, a shoot and ramify corruption through every member of the union. From the American People, their proudest privilege is torn. The eagle of the empire is unplumed. Where is your respect for right? your love of virtue, the vital air of liberty?—where your consciousness of sovereign power?—is it to sleep forever, like a word in its scabbard?

The best way to prevent civil, is to remove its cause. You need not be told that party spirit is the source of all our woes. Arose from its donation, & with the favour of Heaven, the nation. The occasion calls for diligence, as well as decision. Cases soon run into rules, & examples of folly in one administration, may become precedents for crime in another. Open your eyes and your hearts to the public good. When men are equally honest and patriotic, employ the services of the most capable. A new administration approaches. A judicious choice of representatives by the people may make it a prosperous one. Disdain to contribute to the disastrous triumphs of a party. Let the honour of the country, and your zeal—its prosperity unite your exertions, or yours will be the fate of those nations, that have loaded mankind with misery, and heaped all history with ruins.

I am, Fellow-Citizens, your most obedient servant,
HENRY LEE, jun.
Westmoreland County, Oct. 28, 1816.

Extract of a letter from a young gentleman in New Orleans, to his father in Baltimore, dated New Orleans, 30th Sept.

"I have to announce to you the melancholly news of a very disastrous fire that broke out in this place on the 28th. The fire began about 1 o'clock in the day. The progress of the fire was not arrested until it had destroyed three squares. The Theatre and several very elegant buildings were destroyed—the rest of the houses were principally frame. The fire originated in a new building adjoining the Theatre, by the carelessness of some persons who were employed in boiling tar, with which they intended to ask no more. If you inherit the freedom of the soil, the spirit of your fathers; if your business is to be conducted with the pure patriotism which characterized this Republic, and by which alone people can be preserved—you will extend this gratification, nearly one square mile, been done justice to me, and discharge this duty to your country.

THIS estate, situated in the county of Fairfax, twenty-two miles from Alexandria and the same distance from Georgetown, contains about seven hundred and fifty acres. Little River Turnpike passes through it half a mile from the dwelling house. The situation is handsome, and remarkably healthy; the water is good and abundant. The soil which was originally excellent, has for some years past had the advantage of improving husbandry, Plaster of Paris acting with powerful and immediate effect on all grasses and grains. The fields present a good surface for cultivation; and those, now untilled, are covered with red clover. The orchards are very large and thrifty; the collection of table fruit is choice and various. The mansion is spacious and well constructed; the out-houses are all conveniently situated; those for farming purposes are expensive, and excellent in their kind.

For a gentleman of leisure this would be a delightful residence; and a profitable estate to an active farmer. The title is indisputable, and perfectly unincumbered.

A number of well taught orderly young men, with good stocks and farming utensils of all kinds, and the crops of the present year if desired, will be at the command of the purchaser.

York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Petersburg, Richmond, Norfolk, Edenton, Wilmington, Charleston, and Savannah. The testimony of a number of persons at each of the above places can be adduced, who have reason to believe, that a timely use of this salutary remedy has, under Providence, preserved their lives, when in the most alarming circumstances.

Facts of this conclusive nature, speak more in favour of a medicine than columns of pompous eulogy, founded on mere assertion.

It is not, indeed, presumptuously proposed as an infallible cure, but the inventor has every possible reason that can result from extensive experience, for believing that a dose of these Pills, taken once in every two weeks, during the prevalence of our bilious fevers, will prove an infallible preventative; and further, that in the earlier stages of those diseases, their use will very generally succeed in restoring health, and frequently in cases esteemed desperate, and beyond the power of common remedies.

The operation of these pills is perfectly mild, so as to be used with safety by persons in every situation, and of every age.

They are excellently adapted to carry off superfluous bile & prevent its morbid secretions—to restore & amend the appetite—to produce a free perspiration and thereby prevent colds which is so often a fatal consequence. A dose never fails to remove a cold if taken on its first appearance—they are celebrated for removing habitual constiveness—sickness at the stomach and severe head-ache—and ought to be taken by all persons on a change of climate.

They have been found remarkably efficacious in preventing and curing disorders attendant on long voyages, and should be procured and carefully preserved for use by every seaman.

HAMILTON'S WORM DESTROYING LOZENGES.

Which have cured an immense number of persons of both sexes, of every age, and in every situation, of various dangerous complaints arising from worms, and from obstructions or foulness in the stomach and bowels.

This medicine bears no analogy whatever to others of similar title, so commonly complained of, as operating with violence; on the contrary, a particular excellence of this remedy is its being suited to every age and constitution. It contains nothing but what is perfectly innocent, and is also mild in its operation, cannot injure the most delicate pregnant lady or the tenderest infant of a week old, should no worms exist in the body; but will, without pain or griping, cleanse the stomach and bowels, of whatever is foul or offensive, and thereby prevent the production of worms, and many fatal disorders. The lozenges are particularly efficacious in carrying off all gross humours and eruptions, feverish and bilious complaints, and are the safest and mildest purgative that can be used on any occasion.

DESCRIPTION OF WORMS.

And the symptoms by which they are known: Worms which infest the human body, are chiefly of four kinds, viz.—The Terebra, or large round worm; the Ascari, or small maw-worm; the Cucurbitina, or short, flat, white worm; and lastly, the Tania, or tape-worm, so called from its resemblance to tape. This is often many yards long, and is full of joints. It is most hurtful and most difficult to remove.

Among the symptoms attending worms are—disagreeable breath, especially in the morning; bad and corrupted gums; itching in the nose, and about the seat of convulsions, epileptic fits, and sometimes privation of speech; starting and grinding of the teeth in sleep; irregular appetite, sometimes loathing food, and sometimes voracious; purging, with slimy & fetid stools; vomiting; large and hard belly; pains and sickness at the stomach; slow fever, with small and irregular pulse; a dry cough; excessive thirst; sometimes pale and unhealthy countenance, and sometimes the face bloated and flushed.

Persons afflicted with any of the above symptoms, should have immediate recourse to Hamilton's Worm Destroying Lozenges, which have been constantly attended with success, in all complaints similar to those above described.

A dose of this medicine given occasionally during the warm season, will effectually prevent "the vomiting and purging of children"—a dreadful disorder, which annually destroys thousands of the infant part of our citizens. It is likewise the mildest and most certain remedy known, and has restored to health and strength a great number, when in an advanced stage of this fatal complaint. Particular and plain instructions are given for every part of the necessary treatment in such cases. Children generally take this medicine with eagerness; having a pleasing appearance, and an agreeable taste.
